

How Not to Get Left at the Cruise Port!

What to do:

Set Multiple Alarms

Know Your Departure Time

Use Ship Time

Plan Tours and Excurisons Carefully

Pay attention to announcements and updates

Instructions :

1. Set Multiple Alarms: Don't rely on just one wake-up call. Set multiple alarms on your phone or use a travel alarm clock to ensure you wake up on time, especially if you're in a different time zone.
2. Know the Departure Time: Familiarize yourself with the exact departure time of the ship and aim to return well before that time. It's better to be early than to risk missing the boat.
3. Use Ship Time: Most cruise ships operate on ship time, which may differ from the local time at port. Always double-check and synchronize your watch with the ship's time to avoid confusion.
4. Plan Excursions Carefully: If you're exploring a port on your own or participating in a shore excursion, make sure you factor in ample time to return to the ship. Consider the distance from the port to your destination and any potential traffic or delays.
5. Stay Informed: Pay attention to announcements and updates from the cruise staff regarding boarding times and any changes to the itinerary. Keep your cruise card and identification handy, so you're ready to reboard quickly if needed.
